THE BRITISH CRISIS

as the American standing army. At least 75,000 of these men are required for garrison duty abroad. The regular establishment in India comprises about 75,000 white men. The native army is more than 115,000 strong. In addition the colonial militia, the army reserves, the territorials, and all other forces composed of white men, the total strength of the British army is 450,000 men. Making similar inclusions, Germany has more than four million soldiers, and has practically all of them at home.

Army Expense a drain.
The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, ever since the Boer war, has spent from $125,000,000 to $140,000,000 a year on its army, practically the same as is spent in the United States. But India alone spends $100,000,000 a year on the army, and other parts of the empire expend $60,000,000. If the entire British army of 800,000 men, British and native Indian, be considered, the annual cost is $200,000,000; or more than a hundred million a year more than Germany.
